

Median Market Value of Owned Dwelling

WASHINGTON STATE

- Survey responses are based on the amount of money homeowners think their dwelling would sell for on the market.
- Highest values are found in King County, other metropolitan parts of western Washington, and in what we call the North Sound area which is heavily weighted by population in the Interstate 5 corridor north of Everett.
- The remainder of the state reported medians close to $100,000.

About the State Population Survey

The Washington State Population Survey was conducted in the spring of 1998 to provide social, demographic, and economic information about Washington residents that would otherwise not be available between the 1990 and 2000 federal census years.

Responses to the survey were obtained from telephone interviews of 7,279 households that represent the state population as a whole. The survey was designed by the Office of Financial Management and conducted by the Washington State University Social and Economic Sciences Research Center.

Data from the survey, as well as a background report titled, 1998 Washington State Population Survey Data Report, are available electronically at <http://www.wa.gov/ofm/> under Population/Data, or by calling the Office of Financial Management at (360) 902-0599.
